CONSOLE ALERTS

Akme Securitas regularly interrogates your medical alert consoles and is able to determine if it cannot receive a signal (usually because someone has disconnected the console from the phone jack). Similarly, Medical alert can tell if the back-up battery is running low (usually because someone has unplugged the console from a wall outlet or plugged it into an outlet controlled by a wall switch and then turned off the wall switch).

In both instances, a Medical alert control room representative will call and/or send an engineer to visit and fix the problem

PERSONAL EMERGENCY

In the event of an emergency, Akme will call the relevant emergency services, and then begin calling the user's emergency contact list to provide the required assistance. An email notification is also sent at this time to ensure all members on the emergency contact list to be made aware that there is an issue. These alerts are particularly beneficial to specified friends and family who live far away from the user. The email notification complements, and is in addition to, our regular efforts to make direct contact
